The Bowl of Baal ran serially in All Around Magazine in 1916-1917. It is an extremely well written, fast paced, Lost World adventure novel typical of what ran in Famous Fantastic Mysteries. It surprises me that it didn't. Bennet wrote two other fantasy novels, The Forest Maiden and Thyra:A Romance of the Polar Pit.

A pulp author I had recently discovered is Robert Ames Bennet (1870-1954) who wrote mainly westerns and a handful of science-fiction and fantasy tales. I went after his two lost-world stories, which are not easy to find: Thyra: A Romance of the Polar Pit (1901), which was published in hardcover at the time, and "The Bowl of Baal" (1916-17), which appeared in All-Around Magazine over several issues.
