Lunar Discovery: Let the Space Race Begin is the first book in Salvador Mercer's Discovery Series. In the first installment of the series an alien signal is discovered coming from the Moon. The United States of America, Russia, and China all rush to get to the alien device first. In both reading and writing, I prefer a character centric story.

~~Lunar Discovery (Discovery Series Book 1) — Goodreads~~

Simply put, Lunar Discovery is one of the best hard sci-fi novels I've read for years, and would make a very exciting movie. Hence, it scores a 9/10 rating from me. Well done to the author, and I do hope there will be further books in this series soon.

Lunar Discovery reads like a story that should have gone through another round or two of editing. The author uses multiple systems of measurement in scientific and military settings (miles, clicks, kilograms, etc.), and has a heavy dose of seemingly scientific dialog that reads like it came from a paraphrased series of Wikipedia articles.

I'm shooting for late Fall of this year, 2017, to wrap up the Discovery Series. The third and final book is tentatively titled "Black Infinit" and it should wrap up the major threads/plots of the race along with the background of the lunar device and overall intent of the unknown species/race to which it belongs. Have a good summer in the meantime!

In part 1, Lunar Discovery, 3 Nations raced each other to the Moon, China, Russia and the US, all trying to get to a strange Alien device that was emitting a weird signal. The Chinese arrived first, followed shortly after by the Russians, however, both of these teams failed to notice that the signal contained lethal doses of radiation, and suffered the consequences.
